Scott Lowry Fills NWPPA Training Position

Vancouver, Wash. – Northwest Public Power Association (NWPPA) has welcomed Scott Lowry to the Association as its newest training manager. In this position, Lowry will manage engineering and operations technical training events and conferences for NWPPA members. More specifically, he will oversee the engineering and operations conferences held annually in the lower-48 states and bi-annually in Alaska; the engineering and operations technical training programs; and the NWPPA Environmental Task Force.

“We are really excited to have Scott join our team because he brings with him a wealth of experience in and knowledge of the electric utility business,” said Arnie Winkler, NWPPA’s director of education and training. “Please welcome Scott when you see him at our engineering and operations classes, workshops, and conferences.”

Most recently, Lowry was a certified associate with the international human resource consulting firm of Lee Hecht Harrison where he provided training and consulting services. Prior to that he was with PacifiCorp of Portland, Ore., where he provided a regulatory training curriculum which included course development and delivery, and employee coaching and mentoring.

In addition to the above, Lowry also has experience in generation, transmission, distribution, and conservation operations through financial leadership roles at PacifiCorp; and in coal mining, oil and gas, and local exchange telephone operations acquired while working at PacifiCorp subsidiaries.

A member of both the American Society for Training and Development and the Society for Human Resource Management, he holds an MBA from New Mexico State University in Las Cruces and a BA in business from the University of Washington in Seattle.

Lowry has replaced Gay Williams who recently accepted an executive director position with the Ohio Nursery & Landscape Association.

About NWPPA: NWPPA is an international association representing and serving customer-owned, locally controlled utilities in the Western U.S. and Canada.
